

At the radio station.

Greg: Today we have a special guest from the university who is here to talk to us about the Student Union, and some of its important activities. Welcome, Liz.

Liz: Hello Greg, thanks for having me.

Greg: Congratulations on becoming the Student Union President. What are your goals for the students for this year?

Liz: Three things really. I'm working with the other elected students to increase safety on campus; we'll have visiting speakers from the community who will educate us about safety issues: not walking alone late at night, reporting suspicious behaviors, and keeping personal property safe.

Greg: Good, because crime on campus should be unacceptable, don't you think?

Liz: Absolutely. We're also organizing a big concert to raise money for a health outreach. Some students deal with depression, drug addiction, bullying. So we want to spend that money on speakers, counselors, and workshops. We're also working with the university to see if students can get credit for going to the workshops.

Greg: Well that's impressive, Liz. You're trying to solve some very important problems. I wish you all the best. We'll support your efforts by running ads about the concert every day.

Liz: Thanks Greg, I really appreciate it.
